JUVENILE

JUSTICE

SNAPSHOT

In September 2009, Project NIA began our quest to find neighborhood specific data about juvenile justice in Chicago. We had no idea that it would take us nearly one year to gather and collect that information.

Those of us who care about issues of juvenile justice in Chicago face a struggle. We lack current, relevant and accessible data that could provide us with a better understanding of the juvenile justice system and serve as a catalyst for social change. It is a truism to say that information and knowledge are power. In Illinois and Chicago, the public is disempowered by an impenetrable maze of gatekeepers who often do not make information about juvenile justice readily available. This report is the result of hard work, persistence, and an unwillingness to take 'no' for an answer. For the better part of a year, we at Project NIA, asked, requested, asked nicely, cajoled, demanded and then asked again for neighborhood-specific data about juvenile justice in Chicago.

Ultimately, a handful of people provided information and assistance that proved invaluable. It is important that they be properly acknowledged here. They proved to be the exceptions to the rule and we are grateful for their help.

So, a special thanks to:

MICHAEL ROHAN
& DR. MIQUEL LEWIS

with the Cook County Juvenile Probation Department who provided key information to us.

OWEN McCARTER

with the Transformative Justice Law Project who filed Freedom of Information Acts for us in order to access relevant law enforcement data.

JOEY MOGUL
& depaul law students

of the People's Law Office who filed Freedom of Information Acts for us in order to access relevant law enforcement data.

ESTHER FRANCO-PAYNE
EDITH CRIGLER
ERICA HUGHES
SHEILA MERRY
DR. ANTHONY RADEN

provided encouragement and key information about the broader juvenile justice system in Illinois & Cook County.

In the following pages of this report, you will better understand the juvenile justice landscape for youth in Rogers Park. We plan to create a similar report for the North Lawndale community once we receive the information that we have requested. Finally, in November 2010, Project NIA will launch a website called chicagoyouthjustice.com to provide user-friendly and accessible information about juvenile justice in Chicago to the broader public. Keep your eyes open for the announcement of the website launch!

Any questions about this report can be directed to me at mariame@project-nia.org. For more information about Project NIA and our work, please visit our website at www.project-nia.org.

Up until January 2010, in Illinois, seventeen-year olds were tried as adults. Now seventeen year olds charged with a misdemeanor are prosecuted in the Juvenile Court.

THIS CHANGE WILL BE REFLECTED IN 2010 JUVENILE JUSTICE DATA.

24th DISTRICT (rogers park) JUVENILE ARRESTS 2009

According to the Illinois Criminal Justice Authority, in calendar year 2007, "48,065 arrests of youth were entered into Illinois' computerized criminal history record (CCH) system." 58% of those arrests were of black youth and 78% were of males. The number of Latino and Asian youth arrests is unknown. Currently, police districts are not mandated to report misdemeanor arrests to the CCH system. Reporting is voluntary. In 2008, there were 47,068 arrests of youth reported (Illinois Criminal History Record Information System). At the time of this report, 2009 statewide youth arrest data was unavailable.

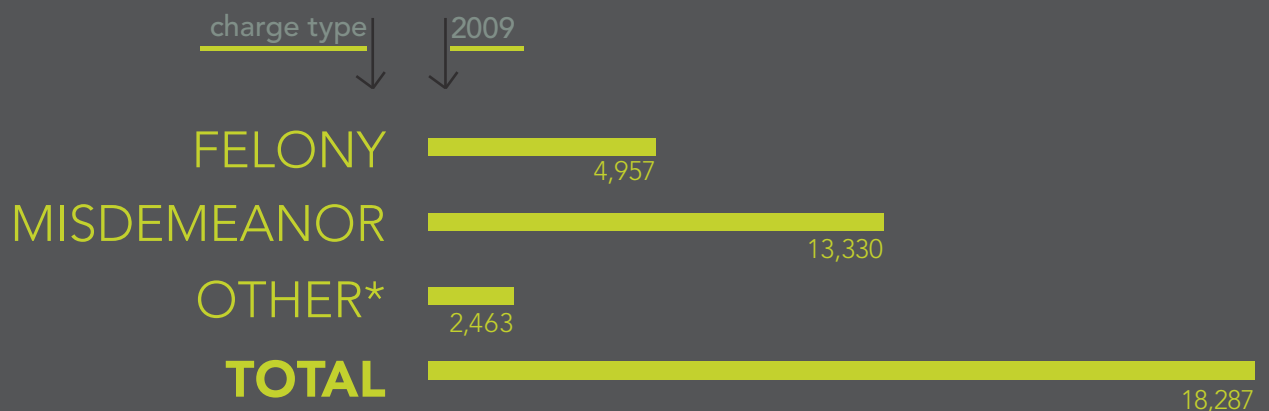

According to the Chicago Police Department, in the city of Chicago, there were 18,287 arrests of youth 16 and under in 2009.

In the following pages, you will find a map of Rogers Park, along with maps that provide key information about the number of "disconnected youth" in Chicago as well as the poverty levels in the city. These maps and data are intended to help provide a fuller context about where youth in Rogers Park rank compared to their peers in other communities. All of the information is based on 2009 data.

Disconnected youth are youth ages 16-19 who are not attending school or working.
